

Personality Project

This project will allow you to examine the unique qualities that help make you the individual that you are. Your end product will be a personality pennant that displays your thoughts, feelings and actions that make up who you are. You will start out with an exercise on colorology or how people's personalities are reflected in their favorite color. There will be a list of colors on the board; you will put your name under that color. After everyone has done this we will review the colors and the personalities that they go with. This color will serve as the background for your pennant.

You will write a one page essay (single spaced in 12 pt times new roman font) on how the color you choose reflects your personality. This will be attached to the back of your pennant. On the front of your pennant, you will attach appropriate pictures, logos and items that define who you are. You must incorporate your name and these images in a creative way. Part of your personality will come out in how you lay out and put together your project.

You will only be given class time to select your color, after that the remainder of the project will be completed at home. This project is worth 100 points. You will be graded on the content of your essay (20 points), your class presentation of your project (20 points), and the visual presentation the front of your pennant (60 points).

The project is due on the assigned due date on my web page. Late projects will not be accepted.
