

Psychology Survey Project

In the past two chapters, we have looked at adolescent development and ageing. This project is designed to let you gain some insight into how different age groups view information and issues. You will have an opportunity to develop a survey, administer it, and summarize your findings.

You will work in small groups of three to four people. Your first task will be to design a ten-question survey. Your survey should cover questions that will have people share their point of view. Your surveys will need to be typed and approved before distributing them.

You will distribute your surveys to ten adolescents and ten adults. All you will need from those whom you are surveying is their age and sex. No names are needed. Let them know that you are doing a survey for a project and that you would appreciate them taking the time to fill one out.

After the surveys have been distributed, you will need to do a one-page summary of your findings. Your summary must be typed in 12 point Times New Roman and single-spaced. You will need a brief introduction about your survey and what you wanted to learn from it. You will need one paragraph summarizing your findings for the adolescents and adults surveyed. You will then need to summarize the project on a whole and state whether or not you answered what you wanted to learn from the survey. You will need to hand in your completed surveys with your one page summary.

Please make sure that you put all of your group member's names on the summary.
