

Chapters 4-6 Test Review

Chapter 4:

Maturation

Teratogens

Newborn Senses and brain development

Jean Piaget

- Ideas on Intelligence

- Four stages and the task for each/what is happening

The role of social relationships in males and females

Harry Harlow and his study

Ainsworth and her theory of attachment

Konrad Lorenz – Imprinting and Critical period

Erikson stage 1, 2, 5, and 7

Effects of being reared in isolation(Monkey Studies)

Adolescent Development

Lawrence Kohlberg and his stages of moral development

Aging

- Cognitive difference

- Sensory Differences

Cross-Sectional Study

Longitudinal Study

Crystallized and Fluid Intelligence

Baumrind and her parenting styles

Chapter 5:

Difference between Sensation and Perception

Top-Down Processing

Bottom-Up Processing

Signal Detection Theory

Subliminal Stimulation

Sensory Adaptation

Structures of the eye and ear

Feature Detectors

Parallel Processing

Opponent-Process theory

Taste and Smell

Kinesthesia

Chapter 6

Gestalt Psychologist and their perspective

Figure-Ground

Connectedness proximity, similarity, and Closure

Gibson & Walk (Visual Cliff)

Retinal Disparity

Convergence

Monocular Cues

Perceptual Motion

The Phi Phenomenon

Immanuel Kant

Effects of Visual Restriction

Perceptual Adaptation

Perceptual Set

Context Effects

Human Factor Psychologist and their work

- 1 Essay on parenting combining the theorists discussed in chapter 4.
2. How our senses combine to allow us to interact with our world.
3. The use of monocular cues to depict depth.